WHAT'S BEEN HAPPENING

During the month of February Holy Angels celebrated Black History Month. Our team read: Doing Right by African American History, an article in Social Education, by LaGarrett King. Below is an excerpt from his article:

King makes the case for “black historical consciousness” in classrooms, stemming from a robust, well-rounded curriculum that conveys black histories (versus the singular black history) in a way that recognizes the humanity, perspectives, and voices of African Americans. “Yes, the desired destination is for black history to be American history,” he says, but right now the curriculum “simply does not take black history or people seriously.” Accurate history instruction, he believes, has six concepts (link included with this email) at its core.

These six concepts are being researched and implemented into curriculum at Holy Angels.

HOLY ANGELS AWARDED

INDIANAPOLIS—On Feb. 19, 2021, Mayor Joe Hogsett joined Earth Charter Indiana via a virtual livestream event to recognize school groups from across Indianapolis and Indiana to celebrate the third annual Indianapolis Thriving Schools Challenge (ITSC). Many school teams were awarded with funding for projects, and each school was recognized for its efforts to advance sustainability education.

"Since last March schools have faced incredible challenges and yet here you are thriving. Congratulations for not just getting through 2020 but keeping alive the goal of a sustainable Indianapolis," stated Mayor Hogsett in a video created specially for the launch. "As our city grapples with many of the same issues around sustainability, we are taking your example as inspiration."

In the third year of the Indy Thriving Schools Challenge, Earth Charter Indiana received an astounding 16 applications from schools seeking funding, representing grades K-12 and school districts across Marion County. They also welcomed their first school outside of Marion County as they pilot ITSC going statewide. In the midst of a pandemic and more, they are amazed to have so many schools making a commitment towards a sustainable future. Thirteen schools were awarded project funding up to $5,000 to implement a total of 25 unique sustainability projects.

This program supports the objectives of Indianapolis' THRIVE plan, to establish sustainability and climate friendly actions throughout the city. We believe schools are a hub of innovation and action, inspiring not only students, but also their parents, their neighborhoods, their communities, their elected officials, and the entire state of Indiana.
